

Arnoldshain Seminar XVIII

Current Challenges in International Economics

Montevideo (March, 19-21, 2024)

OVERVIEW

The XVIII Arnoldshain Seminar is being organized by the Institute of Economics (Universidad de la República) in Uruguay, with the aim of bringing together scholars interested in International Economics, Globalization and Technological Change to discuss their research and to exchange ideas. The Conference will also welcome papers related to the following non-exhaustive list of topics:

- International Trade and Macroeconomics: Theoretical Approach and Policy Analysis (Monetary issues, Migration, Tourism, Regional Studies)
- Regional Integration Agreements
- Trade, Labor Markets and Technical Progress
- International Dimensions of Energy, Climate Change and the Environment
- Globalization, Robotics and Artificial Intelligence
- Migration and International Factors Movements
- FDI, Global Value Chains and Technology

Previous Seminars (<https://iei.uji.es/arnoldshain-seminar>) have attracted speakers from different countries. We welcome academics, policy-makers, and in particular early career researchers, including postgraduate research students.
